Will Get Results in Congress

"What sort of a woman is Jeanette Rankin?" "Will she be able to do credit to the state and her own constituency?" "What can be expected of her in Congress?" These are some of the questions in everybody's mind these days, but "everybody" seems to have learned to "approve" it in the big Western State.

Jeanette Rankin is a college graduate, dances well, makes her own hats and dresses, and has won fame among her friends for a specially fine kind of lemon pie. Here is the true story about which is going around the newspapers of the nation.

She is the sort of girl who won't stop until she has got the results she is after, and it will be very hard to get her in her fight in Congress. She is the sort of girl who will not settle down to one of her missions in Montana, and there wasn't anything in front of her. A prospective tenant was found, but the tenant said she wouldn't take the house until it had a side walk. Jeanette called upon some carpenters and then told them to lay the sidewalk. And so she bought the timber, hired the carpenters, and said the sidewalk herself.

Miss Rankin was a worker for the International Woman's Suffrage party in the early days when Mrs. Catt first began advocating the cause of women by assembly districts.

In those days she lived at the Rock Creek Country Junior League Home, a home for working girls, in East Eighteenth street. The most exclusive girls in the city rented for $75 a week, including three meals a day and transportation in a bus through the East Side streets to the Third avenue elevated. Re-election of the economics Miss Rankin was forced to practice in those days, when the coffers of the Women's League were now exhausted, amused the women who looked at the situation and found out that United States Representatives receive a salary of only $2,500 a year.

"Jeanette won't have to live in a girl's hotel any more they tell me."
